THE DISASTER NEAR SOUTH UNION.—We have already stated that there had been a collision between two detachments of Federal troops near South Union, Ky. The affair occurred on Saturday night, near what is known as Pilot Knob Meeting-house, which is a point about half way between Franklin and South Union on the Louisville and Nashville railroad. The forced engaged were detachments from the 8th Kentucky cavalry, a squad under Capt. Owen, who were marching and charging upon their friends, under the impression that the party they surrounded was the guerrilla force which burned the depot of South Union. Capt. Owen was killed outright in the midst of the charge, and a number of others, whose names we could not learn, were wounded. The guerrillas, it will be remembered, were disguised in the Federal uniform when last seen at South Union, which act of villainy caused the fatal mistake on the part of our cavalry.

The guerrillas who destroyed the freight train at Woodburn, on the Louisville and Nashville Railroad, a few days ago, when last heard from, besieged Drake's Creek, going south. Their flight was most precipitate, as they were very hotly pursued, and in their haste to cross Drake's Creek, which was much swollen by the recent rain, one of the rebels was drowned.

George Reed, who is charged with complicity in the terrible outrage upon Mary Minter, in this city, on Sunday, the 25th inst., was examined before the City Court this morning, and committed for final trial in default of bail in a thousand dollars.

TERIBBLE ACCIDENT NEAR WILMINGTON.—The Philadelphia North American of Wednesday gives the following account of the powder-mill explosion at Wilmington, previously reported by telegraph:

At ten minutes past 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon a concussion of the earth was experienced in this city which was intensely puzzling as to its origin. Windows were shattered with a violence unknown, tumbrels from shelves, and in some places fissures opened in the ground. In a large grove store in Chestnut street, a brick building with the name of "The Powder Mill," a gun, thrown through the floor, a mixture of rum, sweetmeats and broken glass.

During the afternoon seeking for the results of this phenomenon, we were shown, among other things, a house in Carpenter street with a fissure in its walls full two inches wide, extending from the roof ready to the bottom.

A few feet off, in a yard of the house, there was a gun in the ground, as though some mighty power had warped it and produced an opening. The composing room of this gun was very perceptibly bent.

The houses are situated on the Brandywine, seven miles from the town of Wilmington, Delaware. They are about three and a half miles from the town. They consist of three stories, and are built against the side of a hill, each of which is scarce less than a fortress. Not far from them is a cluster of houses occupied by the operatives in the mill. It is called Dupont's mill, and is owned by the Messrs. Dupont, who are devotedly attached to their employers, the Messrs. DuPont. Previous calamities have occurred at these mills. Men have been killed, and their families, one of whom, Mr. Alexey Dupont, it will be remembered, was a victim with his work people.

From passengers who last night came up in the cars, accounts which put together, give us a partial idea of the casualty.

The packing house and one of the mills containing a quantity of gunpowder, at the house where the explosion took place, can be known by the wall. The massive stone walls were hewed so far that not a stone composing the wall is recognizable.

The sound of the explosion was caused thirty-two miles off, by the explosion of the packing room at Dupont's powder mills, near Wilmington.

New York, March 2.

The Times has the following private letter from Port Royal which makes the following curious statement: "Gen. Foster took a Captain and thirty men from the 10th Connecticut regiment just before he went North, and made them his body guard. They were sent to the north of Charleston harbor, and, landing there, marched through the enemy's pickets to within full sight of Charles-ton, and even to within view of the fortifications. They were then quite distant, so near that officers from the parapet could see them. They returned unharmed. There is reason to believe that the first attack can be made upon the Babylon of rebellion from a quarter deemed unsafe."
